PETE ROSE Where to go?

ART SCHLICHTER Back to school?

Australia II welcomed home

About 200,000 jubilant West Australians welcomed the triumphant crew of Australia II that captured the America's Cup five weeks ago.

On a magnificent sunny day the crowd saluted Syndicate Chairman Alan Bond and his history-making yachting team. They were greeted at the port city of Fremantle at a civic reception and then carried in a 30-car motorcade the 10 miles to the city of Perth for a spectacular parade that ended on the banks of the Swan River.

Police and officials said it was difficult to estimate the turnout in both cities and the motorcade route. At the Esplanade concert one officer said 200,000 was a "fair estimate."

"I'm staggered," said Warren Jones, the team's executive director. "I thought we might face the embarrassment of having three men and a dog turn up. After all, who wants to look at a bunch of yachtsmen."

In a day of spectacle, humor and joyous abandon it appeared about a quarter of Perth's population did just that.

The colorfully dressed spring crowd roared its approval to the crew that wrested the America's Cup — an ungainly silver ewer with a hole in the bottom — from the New York Yacht Club to end the longest winning streak in sport's history.

Rose shopping around

Pete Rose said he is talking to several teams about his future, "at least one in every division in baseball," but that no decisions would be made until after next week's baseball draft.

"There are several teams (interested)," said Rose, "and some teams want to wait 'till the draft's over. My attorney went on vacation this morning, so it's going to be kind of quiet for about another week."

Major league teams will hold their annual re-entry draft on Nov. 7.

Rose did indicate that he would prefer to stay in the National League as an everyday player, rather than go to the American League and finish his days as a designated hitter.

Rose, who joined the free agent market after just parting company with the Philadelphia Phillies, needs 202 hits to move past Ty Cobb on the all-time hit list. He also said that "money is not the object" with his new team, although "I'm sure we're not going to take a pay cut."

Back to school for Schlichter

Former Ohio State and Baltimore Colts quarterback Art Schlichter said he would like to return to school but had not decided where.

Schlichter, who was suspended indefinitely last spring by NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle for admitted gambling involvement, said he might return to Ohio State to work towards his degree or possibly to one of the state's branch campuses.

The former Buckeye signal caller, who also played some basketball his first two years at Ohio State, said he had practiced "a couple of times" with the basketball team at the Chillicothe Branch of Ohio University.

"I'd like to go back to school," he added, "but whether it will be Ohio State or somewhere like that (Chillicothe), I don't know," Schlichter said.
