University of Maine Wins Bid for National Championship

The United States Track and Field Masters National Championship will be held at the University of Maine at Orono in the summer of 1998. The Maine bid, presented by a group representing the University of Maine, Maine USATF, the Bangor area, and the State of Maine, won out over consortia from Knoxville, Tennessee, and Gainsville, Florida. With well over 1,500 competitors expected, the economic impact on the Bangor area should be considerable. The four-day event will infuse over $1.5 million into the local economy and will draw competitors aged 30 years and over, along with their families, from all across the United States.

1996 U.S. Olympic Marathon Trials

At press time, we had results of Maine finishers in the Olympic Women's Marathon Trials held in Columbia, S.C., on Feb. 10. Joan Benoit-Samuelson of Freeport and Julia Kirtland of South Harpswell finished 13th and 14th respectively with times of 2:36:54 and 2:37:53. Kirtland's finish near the top of the women's field would seem to herald her arrival as a prominent American marathoner, and her time represents an impressive drop from her qualifying mark of 2:40:17. Samuelson, the 1984 Olympic gold medalist, was the focus of much attention as she made a comeback bid. Edie Dubord of Waterville also finished strong, and Christine Snow-Reaser of Augusta, wearing new shoes, hobbled in second to last, according to newspaper reports.

In the Olympic Men's Trials held in Charlotte, N.C., on Feb 17, Rob Pierce of Alfred, the only Maine man qualifying, was not listed among the finishers in the newspaper reports. Look for more on the Olympic Marathon Trials in the April issue of Maine Running & Fitness.

Maine Running Hall of Fame

Nominations are now being accepted for the Maine Running Hall of Fame. A banquet and celebration of runners will be held in November, honoring approximately six people involved with track and field, sportswriting, coaching, road racing, cross country, and/or ultra-running. Athletes present and past are invited to submit their vitae along with supportive documentation; e.g., newspaper, newspaper, newspaper.

letter, and magazine articles. A brief cover letter is required, outlining the candidate's major records held, notable victories or finishes, and finest performances at the state, regional, national, or international level.

Self-nominations, nominations by family members, coaches, sportswriters, track and road-racing officials, and clubs are invited and encouraged. All nominations will be entertained for at least five years by the honors and selection committee. Preference is generally given to older athletes for past accomplishments as opposed to up-and-coming athletes whose potential for achievement has not yet been realized.

For further information, or to make a nomination, contact: Philip S. Pierce, 79 Waites Landing Rd., Falmouth Foreside, ME 04105-1939, 781-3769 (evenings).

Run Faster, Pay Less

Now, courtesy of the Indianapolis Life Insurance Company, your running prowess can lower your insurance rates. The company's latest life insurance offering, Runner's Edge, offers low-cost rates that reflect an athlete's fitness as evidenced by performances in races 10K or longer. Patterned after research by the Cooper Institute for Aerobic Research, the policy is designed to reward a runner's commitment to health and fitness. In addition to low base rates, Runner's Edge offers premium discounts based on age and race times using a renewable "advanced fitness discount." For further information call 800-246-0331.

Northeast Kingdom Running Camp

Brian "Ziggy" Gillespie, women's cross-country coach at Westbrook College, will be a guest speaker at the Northeast Kingdom Running Camp to be held July 21-24 at Lydon State College, Lydonville, VT. For more information on the camp, call 802-748-2094 or 802-626-6200, ext. 6224/6347.

Bill Rodgers Wows Them at MTC Annual Banquet

by Lance Tapley

At the Maine Track Club annual banquet in Portland on Jan. 13, outgoing club president Ron Pelton introduced the speaker, running great Bill Rodgers, multiple winner of the Boston Marathon, as a graduate of "Wellesley College."

Titters arose from the hundred or so runners and spouses present. Wellesley, in Massachusetts, then and now was and is an all-women's college.

"If I'd had been at Wellesley in those days my parents would have wondered what I was doing," Rodgers, a 1970 Wesleyan grad, grinned to the amusement of the club.

That was the first of a series of quiet jokes that the boyish, self-deprecating Rodgers, 48, charmed the group with.

He told stories of his college roommate Amby Burfoot, the 1968 Boston winner whose track coach was a little upset that Amby had skipped practice to go from his campus in Connecticut to compete in Boston.

Rodgers told of quiting running after college and tooling up from Cape Cod on his motorcycle to be a spectator at the Boston Marathon. "Then my motorcycle got stolen."

He started running again at a tiny YMCA track in Boston—"then I'd go out and have my gin and tonic and Winstons. The neat thing about being a runner is you get second chances," he observed.

In 1975 he won his first Boston. "Winning the marathon changed my life forever," he noted. He got invitations to run all over the world.

Explaining his training strategy, he said he is always thinking of "the race coming up." He does a lot of "change of pace running," and in the race itself he tries to stay relaxed, he said, and pays attention to the competition and the time.

Rodgers maintained that "top runners don't have any psychological will-power advantage, they just train better and more."

Now a top masters runner, Rodgers said "it's an interesting experience, getting older." He said it was hard for him to shift gears. What is he aiming for in the 100th running of Boston this spring? "I'm going to have fun."

After Rodgers' talk, 1995 awards were given out and Ron Deprez took over as the new club president. This year the top awards were presented only to Maine Track Club members, not as in the past to the fastest or most winning runners in the state. The awards were:

Runners of the Year - Gretchen Read and Peter Bastow

Outstanding Contribution to Maine Running - Jim McCorkle High School Runners of the Year -Austin Hardy and Renee Lathrop

Most Improved Runners - Open -Rob Craig and Terry Sutton Masters - Loren Lathrop and Nancy

Masters - Loren Lathrop and Nancy Kneeland

Seniors - Hap Hazzard and Jean Thomas

Comeback Runners of the Year -Willie Sproul and Brigitte Edquid Most Outstanding Ultra Marathoner - Craig Wilson

Most Outstanding Masters - George Towle and Carol Hogan

John Fyalka Award (Outstanding Service to MTC) - Al and Sandy Utterstrom

President's Award - Everett Moulton

MTC Scholarship - Robin Bates John Fyalka Scholarship - Matt Lane

First-time Marathoners Award -Jody King, Paul Lavangie, and Sherry Carll

Rodgers on Confidence

After his talk Rodgers was asked what advice he would give to a young, unconfident racer.

"Confidence isn't something you are born with," he said.

It has to do with how well you prepare for a race, how well you have trained, and it is based on your previous racing experiences.

Remember, he said, that "racing is something that you choose to do." It shouldn't put undue pressure on you.

Also, if you have a feeling you're not confident, "use it. Use the nervousness." For example, start out slowly but use your nervous energy to really push in the last mile.

The Racing Season is Approaching, ... Have You Set Goals for the Season?

by Steve Fluet

As spring draws near, we all start to think about the racing season at hand. The usual concerns come to mind: Which races should I run? How many races should I enter? Can I establish new PRs all season?

All runners should plan for the season ahead by choosing two or three "goal races" to aim for. The racing season should center around these goal races. By doing this, you will be able to focus all your training on these races. The mistake that many runners make is trying to set a PR at every race. This is impossible to achieve for many reasons—the season is too long, too much racing sacrifices your training, you put yourself at a greater risk of injury, and you can just get stale.

A good approach is to label your races A. B. or C.

Your A races are the key races of the season. Your goal will be to set PRs at these races. All your training is geared toward your A races and a quality taper should precede the race.

The B races are designed to be a test or dry run to prepare you for the A race. There are no major tapers or changes in your training. The only adjustment required is to back off your training quality and volume for about three days before your race. The B race should be run to the best of your ability with the fatigue from training considered.

The C races are basically "fun runs." You use these races to experiment with pace, strategy, or negative splitting. There are no changes made to your training during the week. You complete your full training load and include the C race. The C race would take the place of a quality workout. Don't worry about your time or place. Race just for the workout.

Remember, you can't set a PR in every race you run. You would need a taper to be at your best. If you were to taper for every race you ran you would lose fitness throughout the season. You can only peak for about three to four weeks during the season.

This method does require thorough planning, determination, and discipline to stay with the plan, but it will produce results. The bottom line is that we all want to run faster. This method is part of the process of becoming a faster runner. It can also be used in other endurance sports where racing occurs frequently.

If you have any questions about setting up a racing plan or you would like to look into coaching services. please call me at 829-4164. Good luck and see you at the races!

Steve Fluet is coach of the Maine Track Club.

Are you running the Maine Marathon or another fall marathon?

Steve Fluet (Maximum Performance) and Bill Desrosier (winner of the Garden City Marathon and PR of 2:25 at the Boston Marathon) are offering a six-month marathon training program scheduled to run from April 1 to October 6, 1996, for anyone who is planning to run a fall marathon. The basic program will include group runs, monthly training programs, education on marathon nutrition and the heart-rate monitor, tapering, and racing strategies. The cost is $150. Interested runners can contact Steve at 829-4164.

A Morning's Run in Swaziland

by Judson Esty-Kendall

I recently had an opportunity to visit Swaziland, a tiny but beautiful independent kingdom bordering South Africa, and I found that, although trying to run while traveling can sometimes be frustrating, it can also lead down paths of wonder.

On the road right outside my hotel, the Ezulwini Sun, there was a sign advertising a game park only 5K away. Perfect, I thought, for a run before everyone else at my conference awoke. It was tough to get started that morning because we had had a late night at a dinner hosted by the Swazi king who had clearly wanted us to enjoy ourselves. But while the other delegates slept off the food and wine, I took off for the game park in my Bangor Y Running Club singlet.

It was warm, the sun up but hazy through mist descending from green mountainsides. Small huts dotted the landscape, some concrete and some mud or stone, all with tin roofs held in place by stones and tiles. Children waved as I ran by, and since it's considered an insult in Swaziland not to say hello to those you pass on the road, I found myself greeting that part of the population up early for work or school. The people did not seem to be used to seeing runners, or at least white runners.

Someone joked, "Where is your car?" but laughed when I simply pointed to my shoes.

Swazi runners have not yet made their mark on the African racing scene, but I had been told that there are some good ones, including several sub-one-hour half-marathoners. The best Swazi teams are apparently from the police, the army, and the prison guards. It was hard to see from the friendliness of the people I met on the road why a prison would be necessary, but apparently the young king rules absolutely.

The custom in Swaziland is that he takes a new wife every March. While this may not seem very different from American practice in some parts of California, the Swazi king is not obliged to divorce anyone. He has been on the throne for nine years and has as many wives. His father, who died when the current king was 17, had 69.

After about a mile, a game-park billboard pointed me onto a back road, paved but pot-holed, which cut away from the shoulder of a hill into the valley of a small river. The terrain at first was gently rolling, but then descended a long, steep hill a good three-quarters of a mile to the river itself. An old man and woman, standing by the bridge collecting firewood, nodded hello in the usual Swazi fashion. A few hundred yards further and an arrow pointed me onto a dirt track running parallel to the river, a distant mountain with a perfect rocky cone just visible in the haze. I followed and soon reached the game park fence.

There was no gate, just a cattle crossing, and no one in the little thatched entrance hut to tell me not to enter. So I went in, running more quietly and carefully, feeling all of a sudden like a hunter, or perhaps like the hunted. When I came to a sign around the first bend in the track which said, "Stay in Your Car At All Times," I stopped and stood for a few moments, indecisive, almost ready to run with the animals, but uncertain as to what animals were there and which ones would want to run with me. Finally, my complete lack of knowledge as to what lay beyond and the active imagination with which I have been blessed convinced me that I had best turn around.

Heading back to the hotel, I passed the old man and woman again, he now with a huge load of wood in a wheelbarrow and she with almost as much on her head. I started slogging up the long hill from the river. On sudden impulse I glanced back and to my astonishment saw an African runner in a stylish red, nylon track suit gaining rapidly. My chest tightened, and I felt the wash of adrenaline like before a race. Maybe not a Kenyan, but still a Real African Runner. I decided that I had to stay with him when he caught me because, after all, my shirt identified me as a member of the Bangor Y Running Club.

He came up on my right shoulder. I fell in step, and we talked for a moment. His name was Henry. He said he was in the army and was not running for a team, only for "physical training," although his track suit sure looked professional to me. Talk died after that, at least on my part, because we were really chugging up the hill back toward the main road. Soon, even though the pace was fast, I began to feel comfortable like one does when running smart at the beginning of a race.

I even motioned Henry to go ahead on the two occasions a car came by, but came right back on his shoulder when the cars passed. I was really feeling pretty pleased and exhilarated when we crested the hill, both of us smiling at the effort achieved. The only thing still worrying me was Henry's track suit. How could he be running in long pants and sleeves when I was burning up in shorts and singlet?

As if to answer, Henry turned to me, smiled, and said, "Here is where every day I go fast. You want to go fast?"

I wanted to tell him that I already thought we were, but instead just nodded, almost staggering from a new shot of adrenaline. Just hang on, I told myself, hang on until you can't go another step. Henry took off down the gentle grade at sub-five-minute pace and I followed, focusing and running as hard as I could, ready to give my life for the club.

After a quarter-mile of this anxiety began to set in big-time. I managed to ask Henry through my huff and puff, "How far do you go fast?"

He paused as if he didn't quite understand, but then said, "about eight kilometers." The whisper of doubt in my mind became louder and more insistent, ready to shout, but on we went, pounding the road like the end of a race and me refusing to give an inch. Eight kilometers of this? I don't think so. But Henry must have misunderstood my question because after another quarter-mile or so, to my incredible relief, he pulled up and said that this was the point where he usually turned back.

I have seldom smiled so hard, delighted at having done it and just as delighted at not having to do it any further. We parted after a locked-fist handshake, Henry for the army camp and me for a shower and the full English breakfast promised by the Ezulwini Sun.

Cruising on the main road, almost home, I saw another African runner heading out on the other side. Still ecstatic, the morning sun peeking through onto the lush mountain backdrop and tin-roofed villages, I raised my right fist high. He responded in kind, grinning as hard as Henry had.

This article originally appeared in the newsletter of the Bangor "Y" Running Club. Judd Esty-Kendall, of Glenburn, is one of Maine's top masters runners.

by John LeRoy

It was the last day of 1995 and here I was running in the Sierra Madre mountains on a dirt road, climbing toward a radio tower at one of the peaks.

My running companion, Jose, was encouraging me (in Spanish) upwards as I gave new meaning to the term "sucking wind." My muscles screamed for more oxygen, but despite my rapid and exaggerated inhaling, my lungs failed to find enough in the rarefied air at 6,000 feet.

As Jose called "Bien, Juan! Vamos, Juan!" I recalled reading an article sent to me last fall by John Rolfe, famous running columnist for the Maine Sunday Telegram. The article was about German Silva, winner of the last two New York marathons. It detailed how Silva trained once a week on an extinct volcano near Mexico City. And here I was, running in the mountains just outside the city of Oaxaca, Mexico (pronounced Wa-ha-ka) with a small group of runners from one of the local running clubs. Altitude training seemed to work well for Silva, so could it help me? I fantasized returning to Maine and breaking 40 minutes at the Killarney's 10K.

Oaxaca, with a population of about 250,000 people, is located in a valley at an elevation of 5,000 feet, about 300 miles south of Mexico City. Becky and I had arrived on December 14th for a one-month stay and quickly wished that we could delay our return to Maine by two or three months. However, restrictions on our ultra-cheap ($313 round-trip) airline tickets made us stick to our original schedule. We loved almost everything in this city where only a handful of people speak English.

We especially enjoyed the bright sunshine and the year-round spring-like conditions, with temperatures reaching the high 70s to low 80s during the day and dropping into the 40s and 50s at night. The temperatures and dryness made for ideal running conditions, while the cost of living in Oaxaca caused our frugal natures to rejoice. Our three-room suite with a sun deck cost only $21 a day and four-course meals in the restaurants were only $1 to $2 each. Buses were everywhere, with no waiting, for only 1 peso (13 cents). Next year we plan to spend four months there.

I had been in town a week when I met the Antares running club. Only a couple of adult members speak any English, but I was able to learn of a 10K race to be held the next day. Since all of my runs since arriving in Oaxaca had included walking breaks to catch my breath, it was obvious that my red blood cells hadn't increased enough to make up for the lack of oxygen in the air. But my curiosity was stronger than my common sense, so I signed up. Besides, there was no entry fee. And I thought that Central Maine Striders' races were a bargain!

About 160 runners showed up the day before Christmas for the race. In addition to the 10K, there were also 2K and 4K youth races. The course consisted of a 2K loop in the city, so all the racers started together. The multi-loop concept was great for spectators and made it easier for traffic control and water stops.

Speaking of water, they don't use cups, they use plastic baggies. At the water stops runners are handed bags of water; you just bite a hole in the bag and squeeze—it works great! Over the next few months, I will be experimenting with this concept and you may find a bag of water in your hand at the PT8K in October.

The race had superior traffic control with about a dozen police cars and 50 officers blocking intersections and protecting runners. Awards went to the usual age groups, but were large baskets of edibles—stuff like boxes of corn flakes and bottles of champagne.

The Antares club only has about 40 members, but all are very active and all come to the team practices. About 40 percent are women and, similar to Maine clubs, there is a wide range of talent among the members. But, no matter what the skill level, all of the members are very serious about their running.

Not surprising, the Antares club also likes to party. There is a club meeting twice a month with a party afterwards. For the "Three Kings Day" holiday, a club festival was held in which a goat was roasted in a pit covered with leaves. Mezcal, a potent local drink, was featured.

The club has a very good coach who provides each member with individualized training schedules. He directs at least three group-training sessions a week, arriving at the track at 5 a.m. for members who have early work commitments. On other days the members meet in subgroups for runs in the mountains or long runs at El Tequio, a large park with dirt running trails, a 4.5K bike course, and a special area for in-line skaters.

Did altitude help my running? Climbing hills seemed much easier once I returned, but the real improvement showed up in my snow-shoveling ability. When we returned to Maine it took 30 minutes of hard shoveling to uncover our car in the parking lot, and I wasn't even breathing hard!

A typical training week for the Antares club:

Monday Rest

Tuesday Intervals - 15x200 meters, plus strides and bounding drills

Wednesday 1 hour easy on mountain trails

Thursday 45 minutes easy
Friday Alternate 2 minutes fast,
2 minutes slow, plus strides and bounding drills

Saturday 1 hour easy, plus 1 hour of group stretching and calis thenics

Sunday Long run on park trails or in mountains (Warm-up and cool-down jobs, and stretch ing, are part of every workout.)

Nutrition

The Food Pharmacy

by Anne-Marie Davee

Day in and day out studies appear promoting the latest "super" foods that fortify your health, boost your immune system, and even prevent aging. Foods are more than something to eat; they are now being sold for their medicinal properties.

Surprisingly, most of these foods are not newcomers to the nutrition and health scene. The dozens of micronutrients and phytochemicals recently discovered provide substantial scientific evidence that what mother said was right: Foods such as fruits, vegetables, and whole grains can offer considerable protection against disease.

Let's take a look at the food pharmacy.

Cruciferous Vegetables

These are broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower, and brussel sprouts. Numerous studies have shown that a regular intake of these vegetables will decrease the risk of stomach, breast, and intestinal cancer. The compounds linked with this preventive property are called indoles. They are susceptible to loss in cooking, so for the most benefit eat these vegetables raw, steamed, or microwaved just until tender.

Deep Yellow and Dark Leafy Greens

Winter squash, carrots, spinach, kale—mom was always pushing these, and they are usually not popular with kids. Nutritionists have long touted them because they are high in vitamin A, vitamin C, and fiber. Today we recognize that the beta-carotene and vitamins in them can decrease the risk of certain types of cancer (ovarian, lung, and stomach). Eating foods high in beta-carotene may also prevent cataracts.

Whole Grains

These are wheat, oats, rice, and corn. Breads and cereals have been an important part of every healthly food model and now form the base of the food-guide pyramid. Along with plenty of fiber these foods also provide antioxidants such as vitamin E. Antioxidants protect cells against oxidizing damage (think of this as "rusting"), thereby resisting cancerous invasion. They also boost the immune system.

Citrus Fruits

These are, for example, oranges, grapefruit, lemons, limes. Health experts have always recommended at least one serving of citrus every day to get your daily dose of vitamin C, a water-soluble vitamin not stored in the body. Now we know it's not only to prevent a deficiency disease (scurvy) or fight the common cold, but, more important, to stop oxidizing damage to our cells. The antioxidant properties of vitamin C have been linked with the prevention of cataracts as well as the bolstering of the body's immune system.

Seafood

Here, think salmon, tuna, mackeral. Historically, fish was considered "brain" food because of its high protein content. For calorie counters it's long been promoted as a lowfat, low-calorie entree that's ready in minutes. More recently, seafood has been touted for its protective effect against heart disease and cancer because of the presence of omega-3 fatty acids. In addition, oily, cold-water fish are now being recommended to reduce the effects of rheumatoid arthritis and, possibly, migraines.

Garlic and Onions

These two strong-smelling foods have been used for healing since ancient times. Heart researchers have recommended garlic to lower blood cholesterol and prevent blood clotting. Today, garlic has been shown to boost the immune system because of a newly identified compound called allicin. Allicin has been shown to fight fungal and bacterial infections. Both garlic and onions are believed to block the formation of nitrosamines (potent cancercausing agents) that can form in the stomach.

So, be sure to keep plenty of these "super" foods in stock because now more than ever it is apparent that there is a strong link between diet and health.

"O My Aching Hamstring!"

by Lance Tapley

It started when I was training for the early-October Maine Marathon in 1994, which would have been my first 26.2-miler. As it turned out, I didn't run the race because of my usual (often failing), frantic effort to get the magazine out before the first of the month, which at this time in my career with this publication frequently involved several allnighters.

I had jumped into marathon training, from a modest 20- to 25-miles-a-week base, a little too late. After building up, over a period of only three months, to 40-mile weeks including long (13- to 22-mile) runs plus track workouts, I had also built up a dull ache at the top of my left hamstring.

Then, as a final pre-marathon long run, I actually went the Portland-to-Yarmouth-and-back course, the whole 26.2 miles, about two and a half weeks before the event. I know now that I shouldn't have done this, that it was too much stress too soon before the race, but I was driven to it by my insecurity: Could I actually run that far?

I could, but afterwards, even during my easy taper period, that hamstring (right under the buttock) felt like a giant pair of pliers was gripping it. My nonrun of the Maine Marathon came and went. The magazine got out. I took a week off from any strenuous physical activity. Then I went back to a 25-mile week of easy running including a 10-miler, with a day off after every run. Compared to what I had been doing, this was easy stuff indeed.

But my hamstring was no better. It was worse. Even walking around had become painful. I stopped running altogether and called a friend who is an athletic trainer. At the local sports medicine clinic he and an orthopedist examined me for a few minutes and pronounced that there wasn't any bone problem. The problem was just "soft tissue." They looked bored. Their recommendation was the sports-medicine equivalent of "get plenty of rest and take two aspirin." In other words, stop running and wait for it to heal.

These are not welcome words for any devoted runner. But it was the end of the season anyway, and so I threw myself into the Augusta YMCA: swimming laps, using the bicycle machine, the Concept II rower, and the Nautilus room. I also ice-packed my hamstring after every workout and took ibuprofen regularly.

As the October and November weeks passed I found I could walk without pain and stiffness. But when in mid-November, knowing that I was still in aerobic shape, I tried to start running again to get ready for Augusta's Thanksgiving Day Gasping Gobbler 10K, even an easy four or five miles would make my hamstring hurt like a hyena was attached.

So, after another consultation with the sports-medicine clinic, I gave up running for a whole season. It was the winter season; that made it easier. I love to cross-country ski, and I tried to get in as much of that as possible. But, still, it was hard not to run.

By early March I was cautiously taking short runs on the "Y" treadmill. By late March I was taking easy runs on the roads. As my mileage increased I began to notice some stiffness in that hamstring, but I found that with a pause for a lot of stretching about a mile to a mile and a half into a run, after I had gotten thoroughly warmed up, I could keep the pain to an inconsequential level.

And after any vigorous track workout or very long run, I ice my hamstring and take an ibuprofen or aspirin—for prophylactic reasons. In brief, I assume that my hamstring "condition" is something that has not fully "gone away," but something that I have to "manage." With this assumption, I find that I can run strenuously again.

The moral of the story: Don't try to built up your mileage too quickly, especially if you are no longer young (although, of course such overuse injuries happen to younger people, too). And when you have to lay off because of an injury, realize that you may have to lay off for a really, really long while.

Send your "Injury of the Month" story—no longer than this one—to Maine Running & Fitness, 7 Elm St., Augusta, ME 04330. The author of the best story of the year will be awarded a free visit ($50 value) to the health practitioner of the magazine's choice (although this is negotiable). The publisher is not eligible.

Road Race

Bowdoinham Harvest 5K Sept. 16

Tom Thibeau established the course record of 16:05 to lead a small but eager group of participants in the first running of the Bowdoinham Harvest 5K Road Race. Ron Plourde led the chase, finishing second in 17:45 over the scenic course, complete with a challenging hill and a short cross-country section. Paul Baillargeon finished third overall, and was the first master, while Elizabeth Farsaci was the first woman to cross the line. Every racer was pleased to take home multiple delectable donations from Fenimore Farms of Bowdoinham. The race was preceded by a 1K Pumpkin Fun Run which was well attended by children of all ages. The kid's race took over Main Street.

Maine's running legend, Joan Benoit-Samuelson, makes the Kingfield 10K an annual event.

Maine Attorney General Andrew Ketterer. Politicians can't stop running

One of the last to finish the Kid's K. She got plenty of encouragement

Cliff Olson of Hallowell.

Kennebunk Pursuit 5K Oct. 7

Wind, rain, and treacherously slippery conditions kept this race slower than usual, making Allan Muir's 16:24 all the more impressive.

Fat Ass 50-Miler Brunswick Dec. 31

4-mile loop, paved, certified

Craig Wilson, Maine's Ultra Runner of the Year for 1995, won the first annual Fat Ass 50-Miler with a solid subseven-hour performance in mild winter conditions (28-32 degrees F.), no winds, and clear roads. Chip Merrow also turned in a solid performance. Phil Pierce caught Rich Bindler and Lin White at Mile 45 and held on for third place. Egor Egan took time out for a New Year's evening meal with Pat Buckley, Maine Track Club volunteer, and returned in the wee hours to finish in 19:18:01 (which is a record of sorts).

The Bob Dion Unadvertised 50K Option was a close race with Ron Paquette, president, Central Maine Striders, edging Michael Olivera of Bedford, Mass., by less than five minutes.

Speedster Robert Ashley, who earlier won the Maine Track Club 50-Miler in 6:21:05, completed 26 miles in 3:05:50 and veteran Jean Thomas completed 24 miles in 3:56:00.

Five hours into the race, Maine Track Club 50-Miler Race Director Al Utterstrom arrived and made hot soup for the runners which provided a nice finishing touch to the race. (Phil Pierce)

X-C Ski Race

Acadia Crossing 15K Feb. 18

This race was postponed once for lack of snow during our on-again, off-again winter. And snow is perennially a problem on seabound Mt. Desert Island. But everything worked out for the best in this best of all possible (when there is snow) locales for a crosscountry ski race. It was no - exaggeration at all - a magnificent day! Sunny, the temperature in the mid- to high twenties, a fresh coating of powder. Green wax with a little blue underfoot applied several weeks before on my old wooden Bonnas seemed to work perfectly. (I am not what you would call a contemporary, high-tech competitor. My boots were what I use for ski mountaineering.)

The scenery from the perfectly landscaped carriage roads is positively distracting. There were two classic tracks set on either side of the roads, with the skaters using the path between them. It was a very laid-back, friendly crowd at the "dormitory" of the Jordan Pond House, but there were some spectacular racers among them. Sue Foster of Bar Harbor, who recently won an age-group national championship, almost edged out Raul Siren of Solon in a photo finish for third and fourth place skaters. Raul, who was to head off in a few days to the Vassalopet in Sweden, the grandaddy of all ski marathons, is, at 51, the holder of two age-group national championships! We grow some good skiers here in Maine, although Raul originally hails from a Finnish island where they speak Swedish.

The freestyle (skating) winner, Karl Johnson, Sue's husband, complained that he had a devil of a time shaking his wife from being right on his tail. "She's getting better and better," he noted. This winter she has been working at the Sugarloaf Ski Touring Center, so she must be getting in a lot of practice. (LT)

■ There is no room for frills when you're fighting the lone battle against yourself. It's something only a runner can understand.

FEET

At Saucony, we use leading-edge technology to give the feet that feeling of uninhibited freedom we all strive for.

■ That's every runner's ideal. It's why the most important quality of a running shoe is to make you forget it's even there.

FFIT

Saucony's reputation is built on its fit and feel... shoes that allow the foot its unrestricted, natural movement.

• It's no great feat for Saucony to be where it is today, but the logical result of a search for excellence. And as runners are always pushing themselves to their limits, so is Saucony. Working to help you achieve your personal best.

FEAT
