Our RPM 5K from the racquetball club in Bangor on Memorial Day was not a huge success. I hope we broke even with the small turn out. Gerry came to race and race he did in the last mile. Let's hope our 5th of July race is a greater success.

Speaking of success our running camp at UMO is filling up very slowly so get your application in NOW: I'm hoping Joan can come for a day, but she has a whole lot of other commitments and may not be able to. I've also asked Robin Emery to join us and she thinks she may be able to swing it. Kevin Dyer has agreed to share some training tips with the campers and Dr. John Frachella will be talking about nutrition. Sounds busy.

There will be an RPM party at my house again this year. There will be plenty of liquid refreshments and perhaps a cookout. You can cool off in my little above-ground pool or take a 4 mile cool down run with me over Dedham School's cross-country course and dive into icy Philips lake at the two mile mark. All RPM members and their families are invited ..And you'll ride with the best. The best selection, the best service, and the best repairs.

We feature bikes by Motobecane, Univega and Takara. Bikes for men, women and children, 3, 5, and 10 speed bikes, as well as single speed and MX bikes.

Repairs? Our head mechanic, Pat Pelletier, has over ten years of experience in repairing bikes. If it's a bike, he'll fix it!

If bikes are in your brain, bring your body to the bike experts — The Ski Rack.

We've been selling and repairing bicycles for 10 years!

Deke's back with another tale of his many travels. This time it's to Connecticut to the Lake Waramaug Ultramarathon. This should make for delightful reading.

The "Big" summer races are upon us and in this issue you can read about the "New kid on the block", the Nike-Maine Coast Marathon, the Camden/Reebok 10,000 Metre and a beautiful weekend retreat to the White Mountain National Forest for the Bethel Inn Weekend.

The new marathon was very well organized and there was plenty of water ... BUT, wouldn't it have been much nicer to run the last 5 miles through beautiful Kennebunkport and Kennebunk instead of U.S. Route 9?

Camden is still the nicest course in the state...BUT, brother Bruce has still got to work on the post race awards ceremony.

It's hard to Bitch about Bethel on any count ... BUT, where was everybody? Next year the fields should easily double if word of mouth takes over. The 13.1 mile course is a honey.

We have the state high school championship results, At the races, the road racing and AAu calendars as well as the Pack this month, so enjoy:

Let Shirt Works - Work For You

By Deke Talbot @ 1980

ON THE DAY that I scheduled a hearing for an important legal Motion for Monday, May 5, 1980 at 9:00 A.M. in Machias, Maine, I thought nothing of the consequences. My appointment book was clear. I was satisfied that all would go smoothly.

When I later realized where I would be on Sunday, May 4, what had seemed convenient was now impossible. I breathed more easily when my father agreed to handle the Motion for me. I scrawled across the May 5th page of the appointment

--NO APPOINTMENTS! DEKE-and called up the attorney I expected to oppose the Motion, to inform him of the substitution. I explained the reason for my forced absence.

"I'll be running a 50-mile race that Sunday."

"F-i-f-t-y miles?" A long pause.
"You're CRAZY."

I hoped I could live up to such a compliment. Ten years ago, it was so much easier to be relegated to the nutty-bin. I only needed to declare my fondness for running, and expose my bare legs for a few miles on a rainy, not even cold, day. I could draw enough heckers calling hup-2-3-4 to make me feel part of an oppressed, morally superior minority group.

The running boom took away the magic. How long has it been since any of us has heard hup-2-3-4? No longer can we claim to be a tight community of pristine souls made perfect by our oppression. Politicians, bureaucrats, gays, alcoholics, convicts and other clay-footed people from an imperfect world run, and are not made perfect by it. I had to face the fact that I was not on a straight-line march to perfection, either. The nagging doubt grew even as I was being admired for having seen the light. I had to deal with myself again. It seemed far better to be persecuted.

My search led me to a cadre of hardbitten characters who, possessed of high pain threshholds and the persecutedminority moral superiority complex, had found shelter far beyond the marathon. In November, 1979, I ran the Rowdy Ultra 50-mile race in Brunswick, and was accepted into their midst. By finishing the ordeal, I had joined a new minority.

I had earned the right to be oppressed again.

Although I was certifiably nutty, I didn't know if I was any good. In my first crack at the distance, I finished in a little over 7 hours, about the equivalent of a 3-hour marathon. After the near-miss, breaking 7 hours became an obsession (an obsession being defined as any motive strong enough to make me think of running 50 miles a second time). I convinced myself that the first run was purely for experience. My second try would break me through or break me, period.

There was another reason to keep trying the 50-mile. Only crazy people belong in the Fraternity. If I had run one Ultra and called it quits, I would be proving that I wasn't crazy, and that I didn't belong. Catch-22.

I had only one criterion for my next 50-miler; good health. I never considered 100-mile training weeks; such a regimen would keep me in a state of shock. Through the winter, I maintained a 60-mile-per-week base, and ran an occasional marathon. On March 1 I ran the icebox-cold Phidippides Marathon in Bangor, beginning as a workout, but when I picked up the pace in the second half of the race and finished in 2:59, I knew I was in robust health. After the race, I talked with Sam Butcher, Phil Soule and Lawson Noyes, all of whom were expecting to run in the Lake Waramaug, Connecticut, Ultramarathon. Sam warned me to send in an entry form quickly, as they would be limiting entries.

and

I wasted no time getting an entry form. When it arrived, I noted the bold-face caveat, THIS RACE IS FOR SERIOUS DISTANCE RUNNERS ONLY. How could anyone be serious in signing on for this ordeal? I sent in the entry form, treated myself to a new pair of New Balance 620's, and waited.

I had fanciful visions of the Lake to feed on. During the pledge-ceremony before the Rowdy Ultra last fall, the Elders had provided a glimpse of the glories of this happy hunting-ground of ultramarathoning. Their memories of the Lake were a happy mix of Boy Scout folklore and Indian spirit worship. Phil Soule went into a shaman's trance thinking about it. At the very center of this world lay the Inn at Lake Waramaug, which was, unknown to its proprietors, the sweat-lodge of the Great Spirit himself. Now I was privileged to join the Elect for this mystery-ceremony at this sacred spot in the hilly hardwood forests of Western Connecticut.

As the race date approached, Sam gave me the disappointing news that Phil Soule had crapped out, pleading other commitments. However, Sam and I would be joined by Lawson Noyes, Bill Gayton and Gary Cochrane, and I would be considered as a Maine Rowdy for the purpose of filling out a 5-man team. I hoped I could place well with my new teammates, although Lawson would be out of reach if he ran close to his Maine record 6:19. Perhaps I could run in the same time range as Gary (6:40) or Sam (6:46). Bill was an enigma. His marathon times were a little better than mine, but his fastest 50-mile was a 7:21 run with the ebullient, but slow, Phil Soule. Now, with Phil absent, we would see what Bill was capable of running.

On Patriot's Day weekend, I tried to tune up at a 5-kilometer at Bangor. The race was a disaster. After a 5:10 opening mile I hit the Wall. The race was too short to give me any time to recover. "Nevermore," I muttered.

I left Machias in the early morning of May 3, and met Sam in Brunswick. It took us two seconds to decide to travel to the Lake in Sam's car, which has a reclining passenger-seat. Shortly after noon, we started out. Sam mentioned that Bill, Lawson and Gary had started out for the Lake from Brunswick at about 8 a.m. "We should arrive at about the same time they do," he added. "They'll make a few watering-stops along the way."

Six hours later, having made only one stop (at the Wonder Bar outside of Worcester, Mass.), Sam and I pulled up to a diner in New Preston, Connecticut, the town nearest the Lake. I wanted carbohydrates, but the menu was composed of meat sandwiches and beer. Sam was delighted with a foot-long kielbasa sandwich, while my stomach growled at me for trying to make a dinner out of a skimpy B.L.T. and some beer. We decided to head for the Inn, where we would meet other runners and pick up our numbers

The Inn on Lake Waramaug is a sprawling grand old lady from the days when women and children were packed up for the summer with steamer-trunks and parasols. Atop some of the flat-roofed additions of the Inn were cocktail-tables, well-attended on this delightful night. The Inn had spawned several motel units on its lawn, and Lawson, Gary and Bill had reserved rooms there.

We entered the convention-room, where the numbers were handed out, and I saw with delight a large spaghetti-pot. Sam found Gary, Lawson and Bill and went with them to their room, while I proceeded to prove how much I could eat for $4.00.

When Sam returned, we headed for Constitution Oak Farm, about 1 1/2 miles from the Lake, where we had rooms. We ded for Con-1/2 miles rooms. We drove along the curving roads bordering the Lake, following the course itself. Sam assured me that the curves would spare us any long, empty stretches as we ran. We arrived at the Farm and were shown our rooms by the owner. Sam and I went back out to sit on the porch. On the still, tropical evening the scene was overwhelmingly peaceful. In the thickening dusk we made out the outlines of massive trees bordering the driveway and the manicured fields. The clink of a cowbell blended well into the stillness. Only the click of an electric fence disturbed the bucolic environment.

When I went to my bedroom, I felt a vague sense of suffocation. I tried to open a window, but it was painted shut. I remembered the night, before a friend's wedding, when I had slept in a similar room, with the same low, sloping eaves. When I awoke the next day, August 2, 1975, the heat-bugs were trilling in 102-degree heat. I ran 4 miles that morning, and was utterly devastated. I spent the afternoon lying like a beached whale in the shallows of Sebec Lake. I have never met a soul who dared claim running a race on that memorable day. Would tomorrow be just as memorable?

I laid out my racing uniform: purple Popeye shirt, candy-stripe pants, New Balance 620's. That was garish enough. I was off to bed, to dream about getting lost at 48 miles, running the course in the wrong direction, and falling into the Lake.

Sam was up at 5:45 the next morning, and stirred me awake. Outside it was still calm and, to my relief, slightly cool. I dressed slowly, carefully, looking for chafing or blistering spots whenever I wasn't looking in the mirror. I drank some tea and Body Punch. Sam munched on a banana, but I didn't feel like eating.

We drove to the Lake. On its mirror surface we saw lanes of buoys for a MAINE SQUARE BANGOR, MAINE HOGAN RI TEL. 947-4303 crew race. Sam mentioned that a regatta had been in progress during the race last year. With the crowds of crews and lookers-on cheering the other event, the runners had a slight diversion from their task.

The race would start at the Inn, and we soon found Lawson, Gary and Bill when we arrived. We looked over the entry-list. There were few familiar names other than the Rowdies. I recognized Park Barner and Max White on the entry list, but I doubted I could recognize them in person. Most of the entrants were utterly unfamiliar. I felt as if most of them, having experimented a little too long with ultramarathoning, had been sucked through a black hole, disappearing forever from the universe of normal races. Only the intrepid Rowdies, diving through the black hole after them, could glimpse these trapped souls. But could even the Rowdies find their way back? At least, we agreed with Lawson that we wanted to. "I wish this race was held in the fall," he commented, knowing of the conflict such scheduling would create with the Rowdy Ultra. "Then we'd only have to run one of these things a year."

We stretched gently, hung off tree limbs, and looked at the competitors' shoes. I was glad to see the many pairs of 620's. Lightweight training shoes predominated, as I expected. There were exceptions, of course. Sam was wearing Brooks RT-1 flats. "JOHN WALKER racing shoes," I teased him. "10-K shoes, if your feet hold up that long. They belong on the track."

A flash of lime green and orange caught my eye. I recognized a pair of Nike Stings, and my feet squirmed and shuddered at the sight. Its wearer should have won the prize for unfounded optimism, unless somebody went lugging starting-blocks toward the line.

We began collecting on the Inn parkinglot at the starting line. I had been warming up in my Greek Marathon T-shirt and sweatpants, and I didn't dare run back down to Sam's car, parked on the course about 200 yards away, to dump them. There was no indication when the race would start. I saw Park Barner, number 1, wearing a striped green tank top and green pants; Max White, number 2, was in canary yellow. Everyone else dressed in a conglomeration of clashing colors. Nobody but the leaders would worry about looking like a fashion-plate at the finish.

I took off my warmup pants and wrapped them around my arm, ready to throw in Sam's car on the way past. We milled around, waiting. There didn't seem to be an official starter. The field decided when it was time to start off. True democracy.

The call went out, and we were off. The lead group took off at a businesslike, determined pace. By the end of the 150-yard drive-way at the Inn, the leaders had a 50-yard lead. I wanted to start tentatively, but felt as if we were running seriously from the start. I barely broke stride as I flung my sweatpants into Sam's car. Lawson and Bill disappeared in hot pursuit up ahead. I found Sam, and we decided to stick together.

The winding, forested road already blocked our view of the leaders. After 1 1/2 miles we turned into a State Forest. There was a rest area to the right, and one of the runners jogged into it. Already? I asked Sam. I hoped I could hold out all the way, but at least would hold out as long as I could. After the first pitstop, the deluge, my body warned.

We ran by Park Barner, sitting on a park bench, shaking something out of his shoe. Sam asked if something was wrong. "Not to worry," Park answered. That calmed us down some. There really was plenty of time.

We plugged along the winding road, across a small bridge, following the contours of the Lake. I ied w m rse wou rke rks ried to orient myself, to determine bw much of the first loop we had traersed, but the curves made it impossible. would have to rely on the distancearkers until I was familiar with the landirks on the loop.

After nearly five miles Sam pointed it one such landmark; the Casino lakeront bar. He explained that an appearance the Casino after the race was de rigeur id an essential part of the Rowdy itinerary. clearly was shabby and nondescriptoking enough to have a secure niche in bwdy folklore.

As we reached the junction with State oute 45, I saw a stream outlet from the ike, indicating that we had reached one id. We made a left turn and noticed that breeze was picking up. We ran up a modest, vergreen-covered hill, which combined with ne cool breeze to make me feel that a lice of downeast Maine had encroached on the Lake. We were soon back in Connticut, though, as we turned out of the eeze and passed by a blossoming apple ee. After the blossom-scents, we passed irough the sweet decay-smelling fields id gardens en route to the Inn. I tried focus on the smells while I could still ijoy them. Soon enough my nerves would 1 curl up inside my body to escape the nstant assault.

The timer called 57 minutes as we cometed the first loop, 7 3/4 miles. I It comfortable, so I decided to see how ny loops I could cover at a pace of less an one hour per loop. I removed my Greek rathon jersey and threw it in Sam's car. was now dressed in my full purple Popeye r regalia. Excelsior!

Sam and I passed 10 miles in just under 15. A 7:30 pace, which I hoped to carry r a while. Out of the corner of my eye aw a patch of green, and remembered that rk Barner had not passed us since we had in him on the park bench. At the end of the Lake, at the Route 45 turnoff, I noticed that the wind was getting stronger. At a water-stop I crumpled a cup and threw it toward the trash basket, but the wind blew it away. Waves began to churn in the Lake. I couldn't smell the apple blossoms or the fragrant earth any more. I turned my attention to my feet. The 620's were holding up nicely. A band-aid I had put over one heel was luckily still in place. My left calf was tightening a little, so I tried to stretch it at the water-stops, and worried about it.

Sam and I finished the second loop in 1:54. The group at the Inn checkpoint was growing somewhat and had set up some open tents, presumably in case of rain. I hoped they were kidding.

Sam and I soon came upon another group in the State Forest, at the start of the crew-race buoys. Several small buses carrying high schoolers were emptying their contents. The crew-members clumsily carried their shells along the roadway. We had to duck to avoid being skulled by the sculls.

Sam and I reached 20 miles in 2:30. We were still on schedule. One question remained unasked: whose schedule?

Sam began to notice his feet shifting in his RT-1 shoes. I began to tease him again. Before he could throttle me, we were fighting the wind again, and Sam decided he would need to conserve his energy. At the end of the third lap, at 23 miles, Sam stopped at his car to change shoes.

I was alone. Less than halfway into the race, I needed to depend on my own wits. They hadn't functioned very well in putting me in this place. In the Rowdy Ultra, I had needed Sam to pace me to the 40-mile point. This time I felt stronger, and put on a surge to assert my independence. I wanted a good marathon split.

In a quiet stretch of woods before the next wind assault, I passed the marathon in 3:17:59. Happily I could still do some rough figuring, which meant that my brain still had at least a pea-soup consistency. Not far from a 7:30 pace. About a 15-minute cushion to get me under 7 hours. At that point, I dared not hope for more.

I tried to focus on my bodily condition. I was taking water at all the stops, but not walking for long; after a few steps, I would break into a jog. An especially good sign, without Sam here to get me going. The tightness in my left calf had migrated to my right calf. I tried to evoke Satchel Paige's rules for healthful living, especially the rule, "Jangle gently to keep the juices flowing as you move." I conveniently forgot another of his rules: "Avoid running at all times."

In one place my juices were not jangling around gently at all. The many waterstops had begun to overload my bladder. I decided to hold it as long as I could, as a diversion from the aches and pains. After the first stop, the deluge.

At the foot of the Lake the powerful wind had churned up whitecaps. As I turned onto Route 45, a gust blew gravel into my face, and I spat out the grit between my teeth. I wondered if I should have done the Rowdy thing, and swallowed it. The Rowdies, customarily biting off more than they could chew, would have to swallow their problems whole, and needed gravel in their guts to digest the mess.

The wind on the backstretch had me at a virtual standstill, but I found that by simulating running I actually was moving. Up the hill, past the apple blossoms, now unscented. Another body check: Feet OK, full bladder, no cramps, nerves curled up. All systems go.

At the Inn checkpoint, finishing the fourth lap, the gusts curled up my number so the checkers couldn't see it. I slowed down, unfolded the number, and called it out to be sure they got it. I wanted no accusations, brought about by missing checkpoint times, that I had

Rosied the race.

I had planned to empty my bladder in the woods just beyond the Inn, but once there I found I could move on. It was still keeping my mind off the aches, and I wanted to have something to look forward to before the end of the race.

At the crew-race site, the crowds were still milling around but no shells were in the water. The winds were so strong that the races were being postponed. No such luck for us.

At about 33 miles another runner joined me and pointed out that my left nipple was bleeding. Above Popeye's raised arm on the shirt was a wine-red patch. So, Popeye, you've been tweaking my tits while I paid attention to my feet and legs. I'll take care of you after the race. Luckily, the runner had a tube of Vaseline in his shorts, and I greased both nipples.

When I passed the 50-mile finish line marker, I had two loops left, about 15 miles. I was able to start thinking about the finish, but not in terms of miles. Two more bouts with the wind, that would do it.

After I pushed my way through the wind-tunnel, I caught Gary Cochrane, who was running bare-chested. He noticed the blood on my shirt, and related his own experience with an ill-fitting shirt, which had forced him to wear nipple-pasties for two weeks until they healed. What horrible pains had I postponed for the end of the race?

We passed the Inn together, but I knew my bladder could wait no longer. Letting Gary go ahead, I stepped into the woods. The deluge, indeed. I should have applied to the E.P.A. for a wastewater discharge license. I couldn't stop. This is ridiculous, I decided, this could go on all afternoon. Ignoring the continuing trickle down my leg, I started running again. Feeling several pounds lighter, I was soon back with Gary.

We passed 40 miles in 5:12, amid the clutter of paper cups and the vans filling with disappointed crew-racers packing up to go home. My mind was beginning to blank out, to lose its sense of time, but I saw no reason to worry as long as I stayed with Gary. Absent-mindedly I passed by the finish marker, and entered my final lap without knowing it.

I woke up as we passed the Casino. I thought I saw people out sunning themselves on the balcony, raising glasses of golden liquid to the light as we passed. Then the wind slammed into us. Gary and I agreed that the wind was a bitch, but I soon found that I could run a little faster, enough to put some daylight between us. There was nothing left of me but a competitive urge, and I dearly wanted to see if I could outlast him.

I had another unexpected boost as I approached the Inn, at 45 miles. I saw a figure walking ahead, and as I passed I recognized Lawson, lamenting his hot early pace. He gave me encouragement as I passed.

The timer called out 6:04 at the Inn checkpoint, with 4 miles to go. My 7-hour race was safely in the bag, but I dared not hope for more. I was completely numb, with no sense of pace left. The rest of the race would be predestined, pure reflex. My brain tried to tell my body to push. The signal went out, but there was no way to tell if the body was receiving it, or obeying. At a water stop at 47 1/2 miles, I guzzled a Coke. My body didn't care what junk went in any more. Anything liquid would do.

I tried to enjoy the last miles, but felt nothing. How could I remember the exquisite, joyful pain and relief at the end, with my nerves so completely shut off? What about the utter satisfaction I was supposed to feel? What other reason could possibly exist for running these damned things? I wanted to prolong the end somehow, es." ling so I could remember it, but my body, so programmed to avoid sensation, refused to let my senses open up. With less than a mile to go, a runner surged by; I let him go. For me, the race was over before the running was.

Around a corner I saw the finish line, and before I could properly prepare myself, I was there. The timer called out 6:37:29, which gave me proper satisfaction. I saw Bill Gayton walking around, and learned that he had run 6:33 something. He seemed quite subdued for being the top Rowdy finisher, and explained that, in a way, it had been a boring race for him without Phil as a sidekick. There was nothing to do but run, and it hurt to pass by the Casino all those times. Running with Phil was far more fun.

I remembered the story Sam told about them. Somewhere in the Rowdy archives is a picture of Bill and Phil running in the Rowdy Ultra. Phil was flashing a white grin and Bill was doubled over. At the 45-mile point, Phil's wife Joanne had asked if he needed anything. "How about a hand job?" he answered.

I had stopped running, but my muscles kept on, rippling and twitching beneath the skin. Then they asked for permission to cramp. I tried to control them, but after being detached from the brain for so many hours, they would not submit to command. I tried to crawl into a car for the 3 1/2 mile trip back to the Inn, and soon feared that it would be easier for me to return under my own power. Every time I started to bend my knees, the leg muscles started to cramp again. Finally I slid myself diagonally across the back seat, with my head on Bill Gayton's shoulder and my legs stretched out behind the passenger in the front seat. Everyone else sat up normally. As usual, I was the worst cripple in the group.

A drama was unfolding as our car arrived at the Inn. Max White, a yellow dot in the distance, was pushing for the 100-kilometer finish line. The timers called out for him to kick, to get in under 7 hours. The dot grew larger, resolved itself into a man, and somehow he was kicking, somehow the 62 miles he had run at an average 6:46 pace had not totally drained him. He crossed the finish triumphantly in 6:59:45. I admired his ability to race to the finish, which I could do but did not, almost as much as his overall performance, which was beyond my comprehension.

Bill invited me back to his motel room, and with great effort I crossed a small ditch to get there. Lawson, Gary and Sam soon followed us. In the room, we opened the beer-cooler, but the ice was gone. Damn. Bill went out to get some. When he returned with a bucketful of ice and I heard the reassuring rattle of cubes pouring into the cooler, I relaxed. A little deferred gratification wouldn't do me any harm.

We collapsed on the beds and took turns with the shower. As we lay waiting, an occasional groan of contentment would issue from the bathroom, occupied by one privileged soul after another.

We didn't talk about the race very much. We all had cursed and muttered enough about it while we were running. Each of us summarized his feelings.

Bill repeated how boring a race it was without Phil. "If anyone had offered me anything at the Casino, I would have stopped," he added.

Other than scolding Popeye for what he had done to my nipples, I didn't complain. I sang the glories of my 620's; not a scratch on my feet.

Gary seemed to be the least injured of all. He had taken aspirin before the race, he explained, to keep the pain at bay. hi di 7

Lawson lamented about his failed gamble, a 3:02 marathon split which he couldn't maintain. He decided that he did not yet have the power to break 6 hours for 50 miles.

Sam was frustrated about his shoes. His shoe change at 23 miles hadn't helped him any, and had only delayed him. He had missed breaking 7 hours by 13 seconds. Now he worried the the Rowdy Ultra course, where he had run 6:46, might somehow be a few yards short.

The beer was ready, and as we pulled the icy, sweating cans from the cooler, we changed the topic. The first topic was not designed to uplift our spirits. After the Phidippides Marathon in March, Lawson had been stopped en route home and arrested on a charge of driving under the influence. We were reminded that even the alcohol in beer packs a powerful wallop on a dehydrated, depleted body, whose occupant had not eaten for an extended period.

After some delays, Lawson's case was scheduled to be heard in a few days. Bill began giving Lawson a gloomy prognosis of the possible difficulties. As the lawyer in the group, I was drawn into the conversation.

The situation reminded me of my experience in the 1976 Nova Scotia marathon. At mile 10 of the race I was running with a talented Masters competitor, and in our casual conversation I mentioned that I had just taken the Bar Exam. By mile 12 I was dispensing legal advice to my first unofficial client as he spelled out his divorce problems.

I tried to be objective in talking to Lawson, but I didn't feel very professional standing around in a bloodstained Popeye shirt and candy-stripe shorts, with lactic acid swimming around in my euphoric brain. Poor Lawson groaned as I explained the Byzantine intrigues of the court system.

Then it was Bill's turn to groan, as he felt the family car keys in his pockets. He had both sets. "Jeez, my wife's gonna kill me," he said. Bill went to an outside telephone and called her. A few minutes later he was back. "She had to go out and RENT a car, for Chrissakes. I'm in for it now."

The beers began to take hold, and soon we were the Rowdies again, overgrown boys free of constraint or worry. We felt self-confidence from our feats, which scarcely one person in 10,000 would dream of doing. We needed a cause worthy of our powers.

Bill had an idea. Shortly after finishing the race, we had seen a Wehrmacht-division of scraggly, leather-jacketed motorcyclists thundering past the finish line. As we rode back to the Inn, Bill and I had seen the cycles parked in front of the Casino. Since a visit to the Casino was a Rowdy tradition, and the Rowdies wanted to enjoy their beers unspoiled by the acrid body odors of other customers, the place would have to be cleaned up. The vermin would have to go.

Bill suggested that we make a High-Noon appearance at the Casino. Upon arrival, we would kick over the cycles, pour gravel in the gas tanks, bang them around a little, and perhaps shove the biggest bike into the Lake. Then we would file into the bar, and Lawson would call out, "Hey, you motherf——ers. Guess what we did to your machines."

We all ratified the plan, with one minor amendment. Bill would go into the Casino alone, and we would lock the door behind him. He wouldn't have to say a word. As soon as he put on his Fighting Irish tweed pork pie hat, and rolled up his sleeves, the bikers would jump over themselves and out the window to escape from him.

We shuffled out of the room and across the street to a picnic lunch and the awards ceremony. 44-year-old

low

ired ich Sue Medaglia, the first woman, was finishing 100 kilometers in an impressive time. She bore a striking resemblance to Miki Gorman. Obviously, the resemblance was not merely superficial.

The awards were given out generously, and some were left when the announcer came to Rowdy finishers. Bill and I won pieces of pewter. Gary and Lawson picked up bottles of wine, presumably to go into the Rowdy cellar.

After packing our booty, we went back to the Inn and ordered beer and sandwiches. Bill decided to call up Phil Soule in Brunswick.

"You're going to call up Ultramarathoner Emeritus?" Sam asked.

"Don't give him any of the results," Lawson added. "If the pussy wants to find out how we did, he can drive down and talk to the race director."

Bill soon returned to the table. "Phil is going bullshit," he said. "He tried to run today and got discouraged at about 3 miles, thinking of us."

"Awwwww," we called in sympathetic unison. It wasn't very sincere.

At dusk, we left the Inn and headed for the Casino. The air, which had punished us so, was now perfectly still. One lonely soul was finishing the 100-kilometer. We looked at our watches. The race had begun exactly 12 hours before.

The bikers had left the Casino. They apparently had heard of our impending arrival, and had slinked out. From the looks of the clientele, the Rowdies were the only runners in the place. There seemed no particular attraction to the place. It offered only Bud, Pabst and Genny cream; the air was blue with cigarettes, and the only action was one full-figured girl playing a bowling-machine. Yet I knew that, year after year, generations of Rowdies would file into the Casino on the first Sunday evening in May, keeping an annual, hopeful vigil, waiting for that magic event which would reveal why their elders, having heaved their worn-out legs onto their deathbeds, had breathed their last on the whisper, "Remember the Casino!"

As we stumbled out into the darkness, I relieved my bladder beside the road, leaving a final memento, a personal signature written on the racecourse. Someday I would be back, and the course would take its revenge. Not next year, though. My foolish act would be too fresh, and the Lake would save its strongest winds and its hottest sun for me. I hoped I had enough sense to stay away in 1981, perhaps to mutter on that day that I wished I had gone and to go bullshit and to run only 3 miles because I have used all my energy thinking about the Lake...

THIRD ANNUAL GOLDSMITH'S WOMEN'S 10K Road Race Orono May 18

It's too bad that this year marks the end of this women's only race in Orono. It's the only race of its kind in Eastern Maine. Perhaps someone else will pick it up next year.

Norm had his problems with the event, but the course is one of the fastest and prettiest in the state. He plans to race over the same bicycle path course this fall with men and women. Watch for it.

Diane Lounder held on to a slim lead all the way this year and nipped Maggie Johnson by 11 seconds. The Orange Crush racing team took the team honors led by Mary Lynn Cyr, Theresa Lawlor and Ann Loiselle.

NIKE-MAINE COAST MARATHON Kennebunk to Biddeford May 25, 80

Dr. Robert Scholl ran a very smart race and won the first ever NIKE- Maine Coast Marathon. The really big story here though, was the race itself. There was plenty of water, attendants all along the way on bicycles, some great chowder and a very tasty soft drink. I would have loved to have run the race in the other direction though. Route 9 was really a drag toward the end. Also the bike attendants could use a more tactful way of communicating with runners. Instead of asking, "Do you want a ride?" of runners, they should have said, "Are you O.K.?" or some other, less negative expression. Sometimes confidence and concentration are all that keep a marathoner going and any negative remark can end a race.

I hope the race directors take my remarks as being constructive and not negative. On a more positive note, how about Kim Beaulieu? She ran one hell-of-a-race: Her 3:07.22 performance was a thing of beauty. She must have recovered from Boston very well, because she looked remarkablly loose after the race. Congratulations and come up and run the Bunyan with the rest of the 3 Hour Fever crowd.

REEBOK/Camden 10,000 Metre Road Race Camden Jun 1

Bob Hodge went out hard and never looked back in winning the third annual Camden 10K. The beautiful course attracted a record 411 finishers this year. The heat was down a bit from the previous two races and there was plenty of water at the finish line.

My brother Bruce is getting better at race direction every year and we should all keep going back 'til he gets it perfect.

Bethel Inn Country Chub

10K and 13.1 June 7th and 8th

If you missed this weekend, you missed a lot. The lok was a monster, the half marathon priceless, the hotel, citizens and town of Bethel the greatest.

I think Ziggy has put together the best package in the state. I wasn't racing that weekend, so I ran the 13.1 early in the morning in a light drizzle and encountered 4 vehicles and one moose in the serenity of the White Mountains National Forest. I loved it:

Running on ...

by Skip Howard

By way of introduction, this column is authored by a runner/ jogger/racer who's been at it since February of 1974, formerly a mediocre high school athlete with no track or crosscountry background. At two packs of cigarettes a day, or more, and with high blood-pressure (at the age of 25 and unable to obtain additional life insurance without a rider), the decision was made to change things a bit. Through many hot and cold training runs, the loss of many pounds, the pain of injury, I have come to know you, brothers and sisters of the road and track, and it is for you I will write.

the Hampden Fun-Runs, To wit: begun on July 4th, 1976, at the Weatherbee School on Route lA in Hampden, have become, at best, moribund, and at best, unattended. At their peak, the Hampden Fun-Runs had 20-30 participants, augmented largely by the Clapper family of Bucksport, from time to time. Generally, however, there were Ron Howell (who's rounding back into the shape he was in 1977-78... slowly...slowly), Cliff Hatfield (recovered from a winter bout of achilles tendinitis), Fred Judkins in the early days, myself, and occasional guest appearances from Bob Thomas, Tom Mulvey, Toby Hart, Deke Talbot (a shadowy and grizzled figure in whose literary as well as actual footsteps I follow, and whose contributions on the dangers of heat will appear further on), and others.

Nonetheless, there remains a wheel-measured 1/4, 1/2, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 8 1/2 mile course for anyone whose energy can bring it together. It is on the 8 1/2 course that the annual mid-June foot race is held, a course not beloved by all who enter. Kevin Dyer has succinctly noted: "....the only course with a graveyard on the uphill in the last half-mile". Picky-picky !: At any rate, someone looking for a challenging fun run or training course has a ready-made one in Hampden. We're still listed in Runners Morld and other publications, but lack of attendance and varying energies over the years have pretty much brought the Hampden Fun Runs to a slow crawl:

I mentioned the possible dangers of heat earlier, and believe it, they can be deadly. Witness the tragic case of Deke Talbot's brother Jim, in a 5-mile race in July of 1978 in Machias. Though the effects of heat are most likely to, cause problems for those not in quite good running shape, as was the case with Jim Talbot, I have seen experienced runners suffering serious side-effects as Be aware of the danger signals name nausea, disorientation, goose bumps, numb, tingling sensations in chest or qual upper arms, dizziness, chills, lack of perspiration. If you experience any one of these sensations, SLOW DOWN; if the symptom is acute, STOP: As Deke says, live to race another day. He also passes on these precautions: wear light-colored, loosefitting, mesh clothing racing or training, topless runners dehydrate faster. In short races especially, drink water ONLY. It is important to get fluid out of the stomach and into the blood and tissues, to replace sweat loss. Don't drink beer before a race; beer is a diuretic. Save it for later. And speaking of beer, the latest issue of Running Times has an absorbing article on beerdrew and its effect during hot weather, as well as its content of nitrosamines, calories and nutritional value. news is not good; it's very sobering. It might be wise for those of us who enjoy beer to think of making our own:)

Finally, these suggestions for race directors: 1) have a hose to spray runners en route; 2) have water at the start and the finish; 3) schedule races for early morning or late afternoon; 4) notify local police and medical personnel of the Footnotes: the Nike Maine Coast marathon on Memorial Day weekend was quite well-run, so to speak ... especially by Steve Norton, whose 40th birthday a few days before and 3:08:55 finish will send him flying to Boston next April. course is not flat and the headwind was a very discouraging factor. Running it backwards in the future, from Biddeford to Kennebunk might make it a better course. to Marathon Sports, however, for an effort well-done in their first attempt. Another good race was the Camden/Reebok 10K on June 1st. Over 400 runners and excellent support from merchants and townspeople. Bruce and Elaine Booker, Brian Gillespie and what's-hername and others did a super job of administering one of the topquality races in the state. When I left about six hours after the race, Bruce was still on the phone to the Portland papers, one-third of the way through the list of finishers. There's more to race-directing than meets the eye or the feet.

SECOND WIND

Richard Everett of Bangor recently attended the RRCA Convention in Spokane, Washington. He got to meet Don Kardong and ran in the Lilac Blossom Road Race, a 7.6 mile run that drew a staggering 14,000 people. Dick was 453rd in 50:23.

His trip was sponsored by Merchants National Bank of Bangor, L.C. Tyler Insurance Company, Tri-City Pizza and Hair Affair Beauty Salon and he would like to thank all these businesses.

I tried to mention Ken Flanders fine win at the Westford, Mass. Apple Blossom
10K in last month's issue but got it to the printer to late, so a belated congrat's to Kenny on his 31:28 cruise.

Records were smashed all over the field as twenty of the best all around track and field athletes in the state competed in the 1980 teenage and Junior Olympic State Championship decathlon over the weekend of the 14th and 15th.

Jud Cowan, a star athlete at Mt. Ararat High School in Topsham repeated his performance of last year when he won the championship and improved his point total by 1000 points. Cowan who will be competing for Penn State next year is planning to compete in the National competition at Porterville, California in August and he could place well among the best in the country in his age group.

So far, there are just over 100 people pre-registered for the Paul Bunyan Marathon. The quickest of these are:

Mike Westphal	2:30:26
Bill Hine	2:33:48
Larry Newman	2:37:28
Bob Thomas	2:37:50
Mike Doyle	2,40,27

Hell, I'm 22nd on the list: Come on you speedsters, sign up.

Chip Carey called and said that there is a posibility that the super Kingfield package will be moved back into late September, but he doesn't want to hurt any established races.

A flyer came in after I had typed the calendar. It's the Second Annual Old-Fashioned Kings Mills Volunteer Fire Department July 4th Race. A 3 miler that starts at the Kings Mills VFW in Whitefield. It starts at 8:30 and only costs a buck.

I'd love to sell some full page ads in the August issue. Our rates are:

I also want to announce that the second annual Cutler, Maine Lobster BASH will be held on Saturday, Clugust 16, in conjunction with the Machias Blueberry 5- mile. Race in the A.M. in Machias; shop at the booths at the Blueberry Festival. In the afternoon, drive 16 miles to my camp at the coast in Cutter for games and for hiking along over a mile of spectacular shoreline. a lobster cookout will be served - my special pigga hors d'ocores, I lobster, unlimited clams, potato sulad. $5.00 per person for full dinner, $3.00 if no lobster ordered. Overnight camping is available for people bringing tents. For a modest extra charge, I will serve breakfast Sunday morning, and go on a fun-run. a true Downeast weekend - tell your faithful readers to set aside the weekend of August 16-17. I will be making up entry forms soon with further details.

I changed the date for the Bash this year because 1) I will be running the Paul Buryan Marathon and won't be in any shape to be a good hast that day, and 2) Last year people had to travel 100 miles out of their way only for the Bash, and it is far better to do it in conjunction with a race. The Blueberry Festival 5-miles is wheel-measured (by me); markers at each mile; hilly and challenging, but people won't be too wasted afterwards to enjoy themselves.

As always, athletes saved their best performances for the state meet. Note Kim McDonald and Michelle Hallett's super two miles or the depth in the B 100. Perkins of Kennebunk set a new B record in the 440

In boys action the big story was the super half and mile run between Brian Pettingill, Brian White and the stop watch. Pettingill set two new state records in class B. Brian White came up with two impressive personal records in pursuit of the Cheverus ace.

RPM's Maine Running P.O. Box 259 E. Holden, Me. 04429

podiatrists call this the neutral plane. Most feet exhibit no angulation away from the neutral plane, but a foot that is canted or collapsed inward demonstrates the varus angle; the person might be knock-kneed. Conversely, a runner whose foot rolls out naturally (valgus angle) might be bow-legged or pigeon-toed. Following these podiatric concepts, New Balance built the 420 to allow the foot, properly supported and suitably protected, to remain in the neutral plane throughout the entire gait-cycle range of motion without any interruption that might lead to injury. The new generation 420 combines new materials and design features to maximize shock attenuation up to an incredible 70% of the shock experience.
