November - The last month of racing in Maine for another year. Time to reflect on the past year and look forward to next year. Time to choose the best road racers and recognize them.

This month's cover has most of the very swift on it. The start of Kingfield is always loaded with Maine's premier racers, that's why I use the picture of the 1980 start to introduce the "Pack" each month. Names like Wettlaufer, Lauenstein, Palmer, Operowski, Pfeifle, Chipman and Baird spring to mind when contemplating this year's finest road racers. (All pictured on the cover) But one face is missing from this cover. The face of the toughest runner in the state of Maine in 1981. He's missing because he had just won a marathon 13 days earlier. His name is Rock E. Green.

Here are a few of Rock's accomplishments since last year's Turkey Trot:

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE SPORT OF RACEWALKING

by Steve Vaitones

What comes to people's minds when racewalking is mentioned? Straight-legged running, an unnatural motion, an easy event for those who can't cut it as runners, or a group waddling along in yogurt or bran cereal commercials. However, a little investigation will show that athletes involved in this first cousin to running train and race with the same intensity of runners, differing only in speed and distances.

High speed walking requires strength, endurance, and technique, with top competitors approaching six minutes for a single mile race. There are two walks in the Olympics, 20 kilometers and 50 kilometers. Racers will hold a pace of under seven minutes per mile in the former, and under eight in the latter.

What is walking as opposed to running? Two rules make the difference. Contact with the ground must be maintained at all times, and the supporting leg must be straight when it passes under the body. Losing contact is referred to as lifting, while progressing with a bent leg is known as creeping. When, in the opinion of three judges (when available), a competitor appears to be in danger of breaking the rules, he is given a warning. If the walker is in fact walking illegally, he will be disqualified. One need not be warned first.

Race walking is, in essence, no more than highly refined walking. As one increases their speed from a stroll, the body must move more efficiently. The arms are bent at 90 degree angles to allow them to swing faster, and the swing arc lengthens to accomodate a longer stride. The trunk rotates to increase stride length with the feet walking on a single line as opposed to two parallel lines. Landing with a straight leg allows the leg to be used as a lever to pull forward strongly, and the foot lands on the heel with the toes up to get an extra inch on the stride. The heel should hit just as the toe on the trailing leg is about to leave the ground, giving rise to the description heel-and-toe walking. All motion is forward and back, a positive forward reaction for each action. Side-to-side motion with the hips, arms, and legs reduces efficiency.

But why walk? For one reason, walkers are less prone to injury. With each step, the force hitting the ground is only 1½ to 2 times one's body weight as opposed to the three or four times body weight with which a runner lands. Also, with the leg landing straight, the knee is extended and in the most stable position. Walking is a total body sport where all muscles come into play, upper body strength allowing one to power through the end of a long race. Finally, some people are built more for walking, just as there are both thoroughbred horses as well as trotters and pacers.

Once widely popular in the US, walking's popularity has faded somewhat with the running boom. However, long distance walks and walking races are still popular in Europe, even moreso than running. The sport was the forerunner to running, as footmen's races often contested in the 1700's. Ultra long races of up to six days attracted large crowds in the 1800's, with wagering on the outcome not uncommon. Controversy in judging the short races has sometimes given walking a bad reputation, but for the most part it is a gentleman's sport with fair play a prime consideration.

Walking is currently experiencing a regrowth in the US, but lack of knowledge by coaches, and unwillingness by some to accept the event as a legitimate athletic endeavor hinders development.

But walking has many fine athletes none-theless. National 50 kilo ace Marco Evoniuk has run the mile near 4:10; 10 K record holder Neal Pyke was a 30 flat 10 K runner; and 2 time Olympian Todd Scully has run several sub 2:30 marathons.

The top walkers in the state of Maine are Randy Easter of North Jay, (the first Maine finisher in the National 25 K race held this summer in Lewiston,) John Lafreniere of Lewiston who has built a fine age group program in that city, and Dr. Charles Serratella of Aroostook County who is still active in his 70's after being a national class competitor in the 1930's.

So, for anyone looking for a sensible alternative to running, or for the added challenge of perfecting technique in addition to working on improvement of time, walking is the sport. For further information, you can contact any of the above, or the writer c/o Maine Running. There will be a clinic at the Athletic Attic in Bangor the weekend of the Benjamin's 10K run, which will have a walking division in it.

More Than Just a Sporting Goods Store

George Murray

by Ed Rice

The ridiculously small contingent of four runners stood behind world class, wheelchair competitor George Murray, just across from the Paul Bunyan statue in Bangor, ready to run an ornamental five kilometer (3.1 mile) "race" in honor of Murray's continental push across the United States.

One of the runners wryly cracked: "Maybe we should get a handicap start!"

Just watching Murray push his chair the few moments he was in view - clearly indicated that the idea was as fitting as it was comically ironic: George Murray's "handicap" in no way hinders him from being a superb athlete.

Larry Allen of Bangor, one of the area's finest runners and the only runner that day who could stay near Murray on the quick tour of Bangor, was very impressed. "He (Murray) snaps his wrists so smoothly...he has a real nice rhythm. I was just barely able to keep up with him on the flats... and on the downhills, forget it!"

After the run Allen recalled that it was almost "magnetic...maybe even almost hypnotic running with him. He moves so smoothly. I found it easier running alongside him then many runners I go out with." Allen said he looked at his stopwatch and timed one mile they did in around five minutes and 20 seconds.

Allen said he particularly enjoyed the surprised look of many people whose puzzled looks were clearly the personification of the question: "What is this guy DOING?"

Allen quickly also noted he saw many, many looks from bystanders of deep respect. "He gave a nice little wave to some people he saw in wheelchairs when we went by the Eastern Maine Medical Center (where a group of people waited outside to honor him with applause). Other people reached out to wave from cars and from the sidewalks too."

Murray, who later noted he "held back" from going as fast as he could so he could enjoy talking to Allen, excused himself and sped on ahead alone not far from the finish in downtown Bangor.

Later, Larry reflected, "I think he just wanted to show people how good an athlete he is, wheelchair or no."

Sitting comfortably in his non-racing chair in his room at the Bangor in-town Holiday Inn, Murray smiled when asked if he had deliberately tried to discourage area runners from participating in the run in his honor. For, in a story in the Bangor Daily News the morning of his arrival, Murray had noted that any runner who wanted to run alongside had better be prepared to do 5:30's per mile, or faster. This appeared after several days of BDN ads encouraged local runners to participate.

Clearly a little mixup in planning.

Murray commented. "This came up in several towns where people wanted to run along. I felt there was one of two ways to handle it: either go through at almost walking pace, with everyone staying together... which is not very representative of how I run, or go through cities the same way I came across country, doing at least six minutes per mile. I decided I wanted to show people what I could do. I mean in some places it almost got ridiculous. One town wanted a marching band to go along."

Murray has clearly known the pain of being vastly under-rated as an athlete.

But even as the bored party of three-piece-suit-clad executives awaited his arrival, blowing tobacco smoke in one another's faces, Murray demonstrated, again, to those who cared to watch that he is a very exceptional kind of athlete. After using his name for several weeks the group of newspaper execs then bought George Murray lunch.

George Murray might have earned distinction on Maine's sporting pages in an entirely different way if a hunting accident at age 14 hadn't put him in a wheelchair for life. A Millinocket native, he was a standout basketball star and captain of his junior high school team in the early 1960's. Think back a little and the names from that remarkable Stearns High School basketball team that went undefeated for four years easily spring to mind for many Maine natives: Jon MacDonald, Terry Carr, John Madore, Levi Pelletier... led by Coach George Wentworth. The sixfoot-five Murray's name could so easily have been etched into the famous litany if only...

But the same tragic fate that befell his father, befell George Murray.

He remembers: "My father could run 26 miles without stopping. He expressed his desire to run the famous Boston race himself, but soon afterwards he was paralyzed in an auto accident. He spent the rest of his life in a wheel-chair. I remember telling him I'd run the race for the two of us... I began running.

"In my early teens I began running a trap-line for mink, beaver, otter and muskrat as my father had (his father had been a professional fur trapperguide and seasonal worker in a paper mill). My trap line was 7½ miles, and I'd pretend I was running the Boston Marathon. Then one day soon after my 14th birthday, I was running down a hill with my gun on my hip and bang'... my gun went off and shot be in the back... As it turned out, the bullet had struck a vital nerve and I along with my father, was sentenced to a wheelchair."

At first the biggest disappointment was not being able to play basketball. But soon Murray began playing wheel-chair sports and, after entering the University of Oklahoma, continued this training. Until the onset of asthma, or, as Murray poignantly suggests, "Asthma, with a capital 'A'...it got progressively worse until I could no longer compete." Several times he was rushed to the hospital with respiratory problems and ultimately he dropped out of school and quit wheelchair sports altogether.

Still, Murray has never been a quitter. "I returned home and spent three years eating, drinking, sleeping and playing chess," with the goal of one day becoming a master. He studied six to eight hours a day and played at chess clubs three times a week, he remembers. He won a most outstanding player of the year award in 1974 and then moved to Florida, to continue pursuing his chess career.

Yet, in Florida, his asthma got better. He could begin wheelchair sports anew. After training in the shotput, discus, weight lifting as well as basketball, Murray tried a racing chair. He remembers: "For the first time in over 15 years, the wheelchair became a means of expression and a form of freedom, rather than a restriction. I could go as fast in the track chair as some people could run. I loved it!"

Murray met Bobby Hall, the first man to go 26 miles in a wheelchair and then the national marathon champion. Hall helped give Murray the motivation to revive the dream of running the Boston Marathon. He trained for a year, taking second place to Bobby Hall in the Orange Bowl Marathon in Miami, in two hours and 54 minutes — feeling even better about the result because he raced the last 10 miles on flat tire! He admits he went to the Boston Marathon in 1978 with "great expectations."

He says: "I thought I could win, but wasn't sure. The gun went off, and almost instantly we were going 30 miles per hour on the first downhill." But shortly after the eight mile point he really "started pushin'...For the last 18 miles it was just me, the press van and a couple million spectators. As I reached the summit of Heartbreak Hill, I had a vivid image of my father urging me on, and again I heard myself telling him I would run the race for both of us..."

Then Murray realized even something more special was happening: "I realized the lead runner hadn't passed me yet. In all other marathons the lead runner passed the wheelchair contingent around Mile 16 or 17. I decided, what the hell, I'll go for it. An entire new race began for me. I was going to beat the runners as well." And he did.

Since then George Murray has set one new standard after another for wheelchair athletes. He pushed across the State of Florida, 160 miles in six days. He was the first to ever record a sub 5-minute mile in a wheelchair, and has set world records in the mile, 1500 meters and 10,000 meters.

In Jaunuary of 1981 Murray captured the World Wheelchair Marathon Championship in Miami. He has been named "Florida Amateur Athlete of the Year" a first for a disabled person. Today he is perhaps the most well known wheelchair athlete, having made numerous national television appearances as well as being written up in several national magazines.

George Murray's training began with "just running...I didn't really train. I didn't take a watch. It was pretty much a Fartlek workout...I really just liked to run hard."

Today Murray will do up to 120 miles a week, mixing in long intervals and even track work. He notes: "I still like to bust hills, even on long runs."

According to Murray wheelchair race psychology is "really identical" to two-legged runners. "We don't take as much of a pounding on the roads as runners do but everything else is the same." Commenting that he goes in for such practices as carbohydrates-overloading before a marathon, Murray adds that he also goes in strongly for weight training, putting "a little more emphasis on chin-ups and similar upper body work."

In the ranks of wheelchair competition there are five classifications:
Class 1, three divisions (A,B and C) involving quadraplegics; Class 2, paraplegics— with use of arms but not possessing all of their trunk muscles; Class 3, those with disabled portions of the vertebrae but possessing a few more stomach and back muscles; Class 4, lower paraplegics; and Class 5, those who can't play able-bodied sports.

Murray is a Class 3 competitor and he knows that in races involving hills he is at a distinct disadvantage with the Class 5 racers. He remembers that in his 1978 Boston Marathon win he felt he needed at least a two-minute cushion going into the famous hills from Mile 17-20 (including Heartbreak Hill) in order to win. In that race he had a 10-minute lead going into the hills and ultimately won the race by seven and one-half minutes. The Class 5 competitors have a little more muscle control and their injuries are less disabling, giving them a better opportunity to make time on the upgrades.

Yet George Murray can go very hard...He has a 2:12 marathon on one course where the second half was run into a stiff wind, varying between 20 and 25 mph! He may one day run a sub 2-hour marathon. One has already been turned in by a wheelchair competitor, on a flat course with a 30 MPH following wind. Additionally, Murray has a superb 10-K PR of 27:53.

When George Murray had completed the task of "pushin'" into Bangor, en route to Millinocket, there was really no reason for a ceremonial run through town. Murray had actually put himself out, racing extra hard to get into Bangor at the appointed noon hour. A flat tire had derailed his party...yet he made up for the time loss on his own. Now, after a brief reunion with his mother and friends, a quick drink of water, he lined up with the four runners and set right off again.

There just doesn't seem to be a lick of quit in the man.

Consider that he'd just been involved in the "Continental Quest," an event sanctioned by the U.S. Council for the 1981 International Year of Disabled Persons as proclaimed by the United Nations, begun in Los Angeles on April 10. Murray had wheeled, along with his friend Phil Carpenter, across the entire United States in the first-ever wheelchair continental crossing, officially finishing at the U.N. in New York.

But George Murray had a couple more goals in mind. First off, he wanted to wheel right on up through his native Maine. He was carrying a small vial containing water from the Pacific Ocean (strapped to his racing chair since day one of the trip) which he'd hoped to sprinkle on his muchbeloved Mt. Katahdin...still his favorite place in the U.S., he said.

It had been quite a trip across. The duo, often traveling at ungodly early morning hours to avoid the heat of the day, first pushed across the deserts of Arizona and New Mexico. They reached a comical impasse in New Mexico where two feuding Indian tribes had blockaded the available road (they skirted this ticklish situation by scooting, illegally, down a few miles of the nearby Interstate, on the shoulder!) They climbed the Rockies in Colorado, crossed through some flooded roads in the great plains of Kansas, crested the Ozark Plateau in Missouri (the toughest climb of all, Murray said, noting that in some instances one full "push" only netted them a couple of inches), canoed across the Mississippi River (in an Old Town canoe, of course!), toured Kentucky's Bluegrass Country, conquered Appalachia, climbed the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia, reached the nation's Capitol and then pushed on through Maryland, Pennsylvania and New Jersey (best receptions of the trip, Murray says) to finally wind up at the United Nations on August 26, 1981.

Whewww!

Yet, when Murray reached Maine, he found he couldn't put the one finishing touch on his monumental trip that he wanted. Aircraft are not permitted in Baxter State Park and so, he could not be flown to the summit of Mt.

Katahdin to pour the waters from the West onto his favorite place, in the East.

Several people tried to intercede on his behalf, but ultimately George Murray had to pour his little bit of the Pacific into the Kathahdin Stream.

It seems a shame that a man who has accomplished so much, and demonstrated so much courage and determination in proving to be a living inspiration to so many couldn't be granted this one small wish in his own home state...

One wonders where all the threepiece-suit-clad, tobacco-smoking execs disappeared to...when George Murray could have used one small lift?

George Murray has returned to the University of South Florida where he is majoring in physical education. He will be back soon, however, for a special speaking engagement at the University of Maine. Maybe then someone will be considerate enough to give him a very richly earned ride to the summit of Mt. Katahdin... this man who knows so much about what it takes to get to any summit.

A column devoted to keeping track of those Maine runners who venture to various races around the U.S. and the world.

Fall is the best time for running and racing, especially in New England! The pile of results in this issue reflect that popularity. This month, fall marathons to college x-c and everything in between.

BOSTON, MA. SEP 19 Saucony Share The Road National 10K Road Race

Hank Pfeifle showed his condition a week before his big Kingfield win by running a strong 3rd with a good 29:50. Hank is obviously very fit, at Kingfield he was so thin as to be nearly unhealthy, but just right for a fast marathon on November 1 in D.C.

SPRINGFIELD, MA. SEP 19 Long Meadow 5M

Andy Palmer also prepared for his kingfield race by running a good race. He won in 24:08, beating the 2nd runner by nearly 90 seconds. Andy is running well despite a difficult transition back into college life as a Grad student.

QUINCY, MA. SEP 13 City of Presidents Marathon

Speaking of transitions in lifestyle, Rock Green has succeeded very well, thank you. He is now enrolled in Boston University, working for Bill Rodgers and Co., and he dipped under 2:30 for a marathon win on this two loop course. The temperature was 75 degrees and the shade was scarse, not great for us mere mortals, but this was Rock's 8th marathon this year and his first sub 2:30 since his "windaided" pr 2:26 in New Orleans in 1979. This Rowdie thrives on tough conditions!!

BOSTON, MA Oct 4 OMNI Freedom Trail 8M

the top. He placed 2nd to Olympic medalist Rod Dixon (New Zealand), in this, one of America's most prestigious races. Bruce lost contact with Rod in the last ½ mile and lost by only 8 seconds. His time of 36:50 is 4:36 per mile!! Others from Maine also ran very well, Hank Pfeifle was 21st out of a very tough field, he ran 38:40 only 3 seconds behind "Olympic" team member Benji Durden. Ken Flanders of Portland has had a super year, he placed 27th in 39:08. Bob Chasen a Bates College grad '76 and now a Brockton, Mass podiatrist was 65th in 41:31. If you are wondering how you might have done out of 3800, 500th place was 50:59, 1000th place 55:17 and 1500th place 58:33...

LONDON SEP 27 London to Brighton $53\frac{1}{2}$ Mile

Darren Billings of Bowdoinham and UMaine travelled to England for this classic fall ultra. He placed 75th out of 175. His "first" marathon took him 3:20. Then he ran into a rainstorm and a range of hills after 40 miles and still hung on for a 7:39:35 - about 8:35 per mile average! The winner, B.N. Fordyce of the Wits A.C. started out at steady 6 minute pace!!, picked it up in the middle and hung on for 6:05's for the last 7 miles. His winning time 5:21:15.

GAGETOWN, N.B. Oct 11 Oromocto Marathon

Phil Stuart in only his 3rd marathon placed 2nd with a 2:32, an 8 minute pr. Deke Talbot ran 2:50. Phil and Deke are both Downeast Striders from Machias. Deke calls Phil ubiquitous, I call Phil just plain tough!!

BOSTON, MA Oct 12 Bonnie Bell National 10K

A large Maine contingent travelled to this women's race which became the largest race in New England (this year) with 7268 finishers. Marjorie Podgajny (pronounced Pago - nee), winner of the recent Casco Bay race in 2:49:36, and a new resident of the Portland area, led the way placing 26th in 35:38. (Her husband, Steve, isn't bad either. He ran 2:16 in the Boston Marathon this year. - Welcome to Maine!!)

Karen McCann led the Central Maine contingent by running 38:35 and placing 79th. Others in the field included:

Andrea Hatch, Castine	40:10
Barb Hamaluk, Bangor	41:23
Patty Jacobs, Farmington	41:48
Marty Thornton, Hallowell	42:00
Marion Leschey, Portland	47:00plus
Norj Ahrens, Bangor	48:00plus
Priscilla Schade, Augusta	51:08
Marj Lalime, Waterville	56:39
Pamela White	56:39
Patty Begin	59:51
Norma Mitton	59:30
Priscilla Jolicoeur	60:00
Sue Easter, Farmington no	time avail.

VERMONT OCT 4 10K

Kurt Lauenstein showed that he was recovering form after his injury problems, by winning this local 10K easily in 31:45 - he won by 90 seconds on "a really tough course".

KEENE, N.H. Sep 20 4th Clarence DeMar Marathon

A strong Maine field invaded the hometown of the namesake of this race, a seven time winner of the Boston Marathon. Mickey Lackey set a pr of 2:39:21 in placing 3rd. BUFFALO, N.Y. Oct 17 Skylon Marathon

Larry let me tell this one myself.

EDITOR BREAKS 3 HOUR JINX!

I travelled to Buffalo using the free ticket Mike Gaige won at Ellsworth and by driving the 290 miles from Albany (Bar Harbor Airlines western terminus) to Fort Erie, Ontario. I arrived in Canada and bedded down at 1 a.m. the day of the race.

I had heard horror stories of the winds on this course, but at race time it was a comfortable 55 degrees with a gentle breeze behind our left shoulder.

I linked up in the first mile with Molly Thayer of San Francisco who was home visiting her parents and looking for a 2:50. I said what the hell! If I explode I can still easily break 3 hours.

Molly and I breezed through 5 in 31:45; cruised through 10 in 63:36 and then I picked it up. I waved good by to Molly and went for it.

I was already starting to fade when I hit 20 in 2:09. The 21st mile went by in 7:15. I knew I was in trouble!

At 20 I was in 167th place; at 25 I was 200th and I grabbed a fist full of orange wedges and ate them while leaning downhill in the final mile.

I stood on the other side of the finish line and ate even more oranges and watched with pleasure as the digital clock ticked off the many seconds between 2:57:42 and 3 hours. It felt awfully good.

It wasn't exactly a thing of beauty, but at least the deed has been done.

LATE NEWS

Watch for the annual edition of Runners World this winter. Bob Wischenia of that magazine will be doing a feature on the Great Cranberry Island 5,000 Meters (June 19, 1982 next year) as a part of their annual article on interesting races in interesting places.

NEXT MONTH

Hard to say, but I'm sure you'll all be out there running - and telling me about it.

Anyone having information about, collegiate high school or open runners from Maine who have run a race (elite or otherwise) outside our borders, please contact me at Athletic Attic, Bangor Mall 04401 or call 207-947-6880.

Running on...

by Skip Howard

This is the end. I'm burned out. Hammered. Cryin' on the boulevard. Singin' my last song, hummin' my last tune. Nothin' left. Caught me when I was blistered and blown away, didn't ya?

If I haven't caught it, I've thought it, and it still sounds trite and contrived. So, I'm at the end of the road, am I?
Nothing to write about related to running, and no words to say it. Just two days after a hard-ass marathon, and I'm whipped, whimpering, wordless, wonderin' just what in hell I'm doin' this for, this runnin' stuff, this endurance trip.

Why, for instance, am I even contemplating the Rowdy Ultra, a 50-Mile race, for God's sake, on the 15th of November, somewhere around Lewiston or Brunswick. I mean, 12 times around a 4-mile loop. You remember Deke's account of it? Hey, I'm not of that caliber, even of my stature, to consider remotely an undertaking of that magnitude. So "why", she asked, "would you want to do something like that?"

- "I don't really know", - an echoed reply, from somewhere, someone else, while I drowned in her eyes. "I guess because I need to test the limits. I enjoy it. Even the pain, the cold, the heat, the hurt, I love it. I love it all."

I didn't say all of that. Only the best parts. Sure, I'm in a deep purple funk. I procrastinated over long on visiting a dying friend. So now he's passed away, and I made the cliched, stupid blunder of calling to ask how he was, before I went to visit, and his finest kind of woman/wife said quietly -

"Oh, then, you don't know" and forever I'll feel the fool when I see her, and her two lovely daughters. We acted together, we did, and we were all beautiful.

On top of that, the enormous heart of my Main Man is cracked and cracking, and what in hell can I do to help him? What can I say?

That does it. All I can do is run. 5 miles in an hour. Last two down the railroad tracks. Found a broom though. Almost broke my achilles tendons. See, I even screwed that up. So, before I hit the rack, I'm going to stop this ridiculous steam-of-consciousness crap, get something to eat, watch the first game of the Series, get hammered some more, and get a good night's sleep. Hope I can recover in time for the Rowdy. 16's back-to-back with a 10-minute breather for food. Food!! That's what I was going to write about! Food, Food! Glorious food!!

Pasta and pancakes. Crumpets and tea. Coffee and cake. Mayonnaise and mustard and custard and me.

Well, maybe next time.

Biking to Olympus

Installment #5 "Back to the reality of riding our bikes"

In Pelakas, it was getting dark and Joe was tired. He decided to get a room in town but I headed for the beach. I'd heard about Pelakas Beach when we were on the way to Italy.

I got there pretty late and 3 or 4 tents were already pitched. They belonged to some campers who were from Israel, Australia, Canada and Greece. They welcomed me and a nice man whose English was excellent helped me set up my tent. He said he had to leave soon because he had nothing to sleep in and he was there with his girlfriend. I offered to sleep on the sand under a very starry night, while he and his girlfriend had fun in my tent.

When I woke up in the morning, I got a better view of the beach. It was flanked by huge rock cliffs with deepwater coves and bays. At one point on the cliffs a narrow fresh waterfall plunged to the clear blue sea. The campers told me about this being a nude beach and by mid-morning about a hundred people arrived, all without clothes. It became increasingly clear that this was going to be a very interesting day.

Very surprisingly and to the amusement of everyone on the beach, a Greek/Italian film crew arrived by noon to shoot a lowbudget porno film. What a circus. I felt like I was on-set in a Fellini movie. Naked toursits and campers watched as photographers and directors ran around with all their clothes on, filming a bunch of fancy ladies who wore nothing but a lot of rouge. Joe and I spoke for a while with the film's fashion photographer who was a very intelligent man capable of much greater things than plastering make-up on models. He mentioned the irony of "living" vs. "making a living" in such a magnificent palce as this. To him, fashion photography was an avocation and a chance to make a little money, but his real contribution to the world of art lay elsewhere in Rome and Zurich.

We basked in the sun, swam and generally enjoyed ourselves all day long with people from every corner of the world. We talked and shared ideas and laughed like hell at the film crew as they ran back and forth along the beach shouting in Italian at each other. It was hilarious, but in truth, we'd had enough.

We left in the late afternoon and it felt good to be back to the reality of riding our bikes. We headed for the western shore of the island (we're still on Corfu for those of you who've lost track) and made it to the base of the mountain of Achilles. We pedalled back and forth on a twisting, up-hill road, 3 kilometers to the temple. There, out of breath and covered with sweat, we saw the statue of the famous Achilles. It was a marble sculpture, larger than life, of a handsome young athlete who was grimacing in pain at an arrow stuck just above his heel. Every runner I've known with an achilles problem was with me then ... Skip, Loomis, The Mulv... they were all there in silence and respect.

We rode off to the town of Corfu where we ate dinner and took a room in a cheap hotel for a good night's rest. In the morning we took the ferry back to Patras, an 8 hour boat trip to mainland Greece.

We met a few folks on the boat who were very interesting. Bob, a young part—Creole Indian from New orleans, introduced himself in a classic style. "Hi", he said, "I'm on the road now but I've been a bartender on Boubon Street, I like jazz and I cook good jambolia." He was with 2 young ladies, Vicki and Michelle, from San Francisco and Minneapolis respectively. They'd been travelling together in Rome and northern Italy where they visited art museums and archeological sites. We spoke of shared experiences and the richness of life and the hours soared by.

When we landed in Patras we all got beds at the good-old Youth Hostel. Dur old friend, the owner, was glad to see us again and, along with an Australian couple, we all went out for fish at our favorite cafe at the end of the docks. Later, we strolled to a taverna referred to us by some locals. It was tucked away on a side street in a seldom traveled part of town. Inside there was one room with huge wooden kegs lying on their sides. There were 15 or 20 old men sitting down at small tables drinking the only drink in the house -Retsina. I walked in with a smile but I was scared - I knew we were invading their sanctuary, and besides, three of us were female and this didn't look like a place you'd want to take a nice girl. Quietly and sternly, the old men made room around 2 small tables and they motioned for all of us to sit down. The owner brought a copper pitcher of Retsina and some glasses. (Retsina is a white wine aged in kegs which are lined with pine resin; the pine comes through in a subtle way but the potency comes through like a locomotive.) The men slowly began to smile when they saw how much we enjoyed our first taste of their favorite drink. The owner brought another pitcher to the table with exclamations of "Mr. Cristo! Mr. Cristo!" and a thin man with dark leathery skin, indicated that this one was on him. He kept winking at me implying that I should drink more. One of the men left, came back with a tape recorder and some tapes and another man with a kind innocent face asked the girls to dance. He was a great dancer as he dodged very gracefully between the crowded tables. All 3 girls danced with him at least twice and the wine kept coming and coming. Mr. Cristo ran home to get his 14 year old son who could speak English. He was so proud that his son could talk to the Americans that he was simply beside himself. The son, slightly embarrassed, drank a soda and explained that he had a girlfriend, a pen pal, in Minnesota. He hoped he could go there some day. I told him I thought his father was marvelous and he beamed.

Before we left I took photos and promised to send prints. All the men shook my hand and I felt so much at home, as if these were my people, my very own family.
